

Any revision to telephone privacy act would be a mistake. Although most "human" soliciting has been effectively curtailed, the digitalized searches continue to be a problem. Once the auto dialing mechanism makes contact, even w/answering machines, numerous repeated & annoying hangups are the result. Increasing, not decreasing the protection should be the issue at hand.